BIGGEST GUIDED MISSILE IN THE WORLD CALLED "LOON"

POINT MUGU (Calif.): The Loon is the unfficial name for the greatest guided missile in the world, a 6,000 pound radio-controlled aerial torpedo whose development was revealed yesterday by the Navy. It increases the effective heavy bombardment range of the navy from 25 miles to 150 miles. The $15,000 missile has a speed in excess of 425 miles per hour. Naval officers told correspondents that developments in prospect include pilotless aircraft, capable of speeds of several thousand miles per hour, jet propelled and capable of "sniffing out" the target without help fom human hands.

UNILATERAL SUICIDE PACT LANDS LAD IN PADDED CELL

PASADENA: A tale of love and frustration was told yesterday by Gerald Snow Welch, 18, from a padded cell in the jail here. Welch told how he'd beaten his girl to death when he failed to kill her with his only two rifle bullets. "I'd rather let the state execute me, but I would kill myself if I got the chance" he explained cryptically. He surrendered to police Saturday after showing them the body of his 16 year old sweetheart, Dolores Gewkes.

War Vet Tries to Kill Self

GRASS VALLEY: Kenneth Cox, 26, disabled war veteran, is in a local hospital suffering from second and third degree burns, which Grass Valley police believe resulted from his preparations to commit suicide. The police believe he either changed his mind or momentarily forgot, and lighted a cigarette in his dining room next to the gas filled kitchen that had been carefully chinked with kleenex.

The resultant explosion at 9 p. m. Sunday night left Cox dazed. When the police arrived he was calling for help. An investigation revealed he had written a five page farewell note to his wife with whom he had been recently reconciled, after a separation.

When the gas,, which had been escaping for an indefinite time, exploded the front door and casing of the house were blown out. The ceiling raised, and glass splinters from the front windows blown across Washington Street where the house stands. Prompt arrival of firemen prevented a fire. Several inflammables such as the window curtains were ablaze when they arrived. Cox, according to a statement to police had taken several codene tablets earlier in the day, apparently forgot his preparations to commit suicide by inhaling gas, and lighted a cigarette..

NO WATER IN YUBA DITCH UNTIL THURSDAY

GRASS VALLEY: The Pacific Gas and Electric Company Friday served notice that water will be turned off in the South Yuba Ditch for four days beginning yesterday, in order to make much needed repairs and improvements in it. The P. G. and E. owns the ditch..

One hundred men will be strung along the ditch which is a part of the Nevada Irrigation District distribution system. Some of the reservoirs supplied by this ditch may be drained before the water is turned on again at the end of four days. It it expected that the water will be turned off several times during the five weeks in which the work is in progress.

The NID states that these shutdowns will not immediately affect Nevada City and Grass Valley reservoirs, but that those supplying Cedar Ridge, Town Talk, Aidge Road and Chicago Park districts may drop to a low level and water users are asked to use the supply sparingly.

Stahlschmidt, well known apiarist, heard his dog barking and russhed out to see what had aroused it. As he got outside, the dog's bark turned to a howl of pain. The sturdy porcupine had deposited about 20 half inch quills in the dog's muzzle.

The porcupine retreated under some boards, where Stahlschmidt belabored it with a large stick, at the same time calling to his wife to fetch his .22. He finish the animal off with a bullet in the head.

It took some time before the dog was convinced that Stahlschmidt qualified as an emergency veterinarian able to help him by pulling out the quills. The porcupine weighed an estimated 30 pounds.

Robbery Motivated Killer in Tavern Owner Slaying

GRASS VALLEY: The body of a man, yesterday identified as that of John Owen Brownfield, 48, lately of Portland, Oregon, was found Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock alongside the Marysville Highway, three miles west of the Yuba-Nevada County boundary with a gaping shotgun wound in the back of his hea. Sheriff Richard W. Hoskins declares Brownfield was murdered.

The body was found by two men, Claude C. Penny and Charles N. Crowell, residents of Rodeo, who were coming to Grass Valley to spend the week end. They ran out of gas and discovered Brownfield's body lying about 15 feet from the pavement among low brush and grass.

Sheriff Hoskins and Coroner Alvah Hooper was notified by phone from the Hillcrest Service Station three miles west of where the body was found by Penny and Crowell.. The sheriff put out an all points radio bulletin giving a description of the murdered man and the Coroner ordered an immediate autopsy by Dr. Daniel Hirsch. The autopsy revealed the shotgun had been discharged close to the target. The entire load of No. 7 shot was found inside the skull.

As a result of the sheriff's shortwave broadcast the Marysville police got busy on a clue. They had found a locked car parked in Marysville Wednesday night and had repeatedly tagged it. They traced the car to the Vada Auto Court, and discovered that Mrs. Rose Brownfield living there had not seen her husband since Wednesday night. She stated that she had not been uneasy about her husband because he had disappeared for a day or so at other times. Description of the murdered man's clothes, as given her. She stated he hrad bought home a man to dinner Wednesday evening and that the two had gone out together.

Mrs. Brownfield said that her husband had owned a tavern in Portland, had sold out and was now looking around to buy one in California. Peace officers throughout California, have a description of the man with whom Brownfield was last seen; and are making energetic search for him.

Stanley Mitchell, deputy coroner, who recovered the body Saturday evening states the man was apparently in his fifties, was 5 feet, nine inches tall. He had been dead for some days. Covering the corpse was a robe of mixed colors, blue and red predominating. The pants were gray of a good material. He wore a white sports shirt. Shirt and underwear were apparently new and bore no laundry marks. Mitchell said there was nothing about the man by which he might be identified.

Mrs. Brownfield told Marysville police the name of the man with whom her husband was last seen Wednesday night, and Sheriff Hoskins and peace officers including the highway patrol are now on the lookout for him. Mrs. Brownfield stated her husband had about $700 in currency on his person on Wednesday evening. When his body was found, Coroner Hooper states, but a dollar or two in change remained in his clothing. Neither pocketbook nor bill fold was found.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder when I hear one say,
"I envy those who sing or play
Or speak in an accomplished way;
I wish that I had talent too
And could perform as others do."

You have met those envious mortals many times and so have I. They sigh regretfully and tell you, they yould "give the world", if they could play the piano or speak in public and sometimes they are so convincing that you feel sorry for them and wonder why nature failed to endow them with the gifts they so ardently desire.

Lately. I have hardened my heart and when a sweet young thing tells me that she would give the world if she could paint sing or play like one of her companions, I know she is fibbing. Perhaps unconsciously, but never the less, she is fibbing.

When one truly and ardently desires to do a task of self improvement, to acquire an accomplishment, or to make good in any one of a number of ways, he will have no time for envy, or idle wishing; he will hear a voice within him saying, "why not?" And he will get busy.

Opportunity waits upon every hand and most of us have undeveloped talents which we might polish up and bring into service. It may be romantic, to look pathetic and say, "I'd give the world, if I could do this, that, or the other thing." but its just plain sense to heed the little phrase, "why not," and find the real answer to the problem of our limitations.

I have never believed that the often times quoted declaration, "as a man thinketh, so is he," applied in every instance. I know men who think they are Isaac Waltons, who never could catch a fish; and I know girls who think themselves much more than they are, but I do believe that if we take the advice of Socrates and try to know ourselves, if we appraise our gifts and then determine to improve them, the sky may be the limit of our success—at least if we fail to reach the very highest mark, we shall find in our improved talents sources of unfailing pleasure and an opportunity to serve and to inspire others. Years ago, two little words joined company and began their march through the corridors of time. "Why not?" What a power and inspiration of human progress they turned out to be. Now, in this age of ours, they whisper around the world and wherever there is a task to be done, a great adventure to be undertaken, oreven a simple desire for greater good to one's self or to humanity stirs the heart, a voice which it would be well to heed, urges action by repeating that little phrase, "why not?"

Mighty deeds of faith and courage,
Leading on to better things,
Broken chains of superstition,
Fallen thrones or tyrant kings,
Are the net result, I'm thinking,
Of that legendary plot,
Wherein serpent, fiend or angel,
Said suggestively, "why not?"

—Adeline Merriam Conner.

THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L.

As we have remarked before in this column, it was St. Paul who advised moderation in all things. It is still good advice after 2000 years as such a matter. Our labor leaders are finding it out now, just as 40 years ago our captains of industry discovered an anti trust fence had been built around them by legislative means to keep them from invading the rights of their fellow citizens. Excesses in a democracy always lead to remedial measures. We want no hog wild, hog selfish groups in our republic.

The House of Representatives has just passed a measure, which our hog wild labor leaders call "punitive", but sensible citizens everywhere hail as corrective. It is just one more step to bring Murray, Lewis and Green nearer to the snubbing post, where they can be gentled a little and taught good manners under bridle and saddle. They will have to learn the lesson of the greater good to the greater number, just as Andrew Carnegie was taught, forty years ago. The Mellon heirs, still today learning that more than one company can make aluminum under our system of free enterprise. Oppression whether of worker or capitalist groups is repugnant to Americans.

We note particularly in the House measure that industry wide bargaining is to be much restricted. If this provision is continued in the bill that finally passes both Senate and House, it will mean the severe cramping of the John L. Lewis style. Individual mine owners or companies will be able to bargain locally with their employes, as we believe they should.

A coal mine situated in the midst of a good agricultural section should cost less to operate from the standpoint of payroll than one in a thickly populated district where most food has to be shipped in. Conditions of living vary. Good wages in one place are very poor wages in another from the miner's standpoint of living costs. Imposition of a uniform wage scale throughout the country, in any industry, penalizes some worker groups and unduly rewards others.

The greatest objection however to industry wide control by labor unions is the tremendous power it gives labor organizations to cripple their country, and to deprive millions of their fellow citizens, union or nonunion, of their livelihood. This might be obviated by compulsory arbitration, but that would mean setting up a new judicial process. That in turn, would mean a terrific struggle to influence the appointment of the arbitrators, pro or con, for labor or for management. Even in the appointment of the U. S. Supreme Court members, we recently have witnessed disgraceful pulling and hauling by political parties to further a national policy beneficial to special groups. Compulsory arbitration, however, could be an alternative to povisions of the House bill which would radically curb the power of labor leaders now wield, to call nation-wide strikes such as the present telephone strike..

Another feature of the house bill to curb labor union excesses is the abolition of the closed shop and ban on maintenance of union membership. Why should an employer be burdened with seeing to it that every man in his shop joins a union? Why should an American citizen be forced to join any organization against his will? Labor union leaders insist that no man should enjoy the benefits of higher dages and better working conditions, unless he pays his share of the costs? We agree there is a moral obligation there, but we believe it should be up to the union to use moral suasion, education, rather than stark naked force to accomplish that result. At present the argument of the union organized is simply: "Join us, or we will see to it that you starve."

What the Senate will do with the House labor bill is still undecided, but we think the overwhelming majorit which passed the House bill may influence the Senate leaders to move very carefully in amending any of its essential provisions. The House passed the bill by such a large majority that even in case the President vetoes it, there is an ample marzin to repass it. And, as we must remember that only a year ago, it was the President who suggested drafting some thousands of recalcitrant strikers into the army.

NEVADA CITY LONG AGO

FLOY MARGARET REYNOLDS

20 YEARS AGO

Albert M. Dressler of San Francisco, collector of historical items and widely known for his historical writings was visiting in Nevada City following a trip to Downieville where he gathered eighteen large cartons and three rates of relics. In the lot was the first cash register taken to Downieville, some very old cooking utensils that had been in the Guold basement for over fifty years, an old lantern that hung in the St. Charles Hotel, a large pair of gold scales for weighing up to 100 pounds and an old leather trunk filled ith early day clothing and bric-a-brac. Mr. Dressler also gathered data to be used in publication of two books, one regarding the early days of the Chinese and the other a biography of John Mason who went to Sierra County in 1851 and was still living.

Mrs. Raglan Tuttle went to Auburn where she spoke to the Woman's Improvement Club on The Miracle. Mrs. P. G. Scadden and Mrs. W. L. Mobley accompanied her.

50 YEARS AGO

A quartz ledge showing free gold was discovered in William Hoskins' lot on Piety Hill.

John McCarthy sold his group of mines in Washington township. Sale included a water right of 400 inches of water and a ditch eight miles long and included all the ground and claims from the Honest Frank and El Capitan to Poorman's Creek below the Spanish Mine. The price was not made public..

Nevada City with a population of 4000 inhabitants was purely a mining town. The Deer Creek basin in which it is located had hundreds of quartz lodes, many of which were being worked and money paid out for labor in them amounted to from $35,000 to $45,000 monthly.

County Clerk J. J. Greany and L. J. Trautman were the winners in a suit drawing contest held at Frank Smith's.

Miss May Goss and Mrs. Leitiia W. Owen of Durham and Mrs. Ruth Dodd of Redding were holding evangelical meetings at the Congregational Church. The ladies, aware of the peculiar fact that the initials of their surnames spelled "GOD" always registered their names in that order and entered or left a room or took seats in the same order.

Mrs. "Cad" Thompson an historic Comstock character died at her home in Virginia City after a long colorful, notorious career.

75 YEARS AGO

Seven hundred and fifty shares of stock in the North Star Mining Company held in pledge by W. B. Bourn for $75,000 yas sold at auction in San Francisco.

The bill providing for tram roads and under which it was proposed to build a railrod from Colfax to Nevada City and Grass Valley passed the senate and was sent to the assembly where Assemblyman Barker, Bell, Everett and Days of this county were waiting to push it through..

Ellerton's Dramatic and Comedy Troup was playing at the Nevada Theatre in the thrilling and beautiful play. Fair Maid of Crossey. The cast included the Misses May and Ella Griffin, Sam P. Everett, Wm. Ellerton and Tony Ward.

The net receipts of a ball given for the benefit of the Catholic Church were $900.

By a new revenue law a poll tax of $2 on every male inhabitant of the state between the ages of 21 and 60 was levied and was to be paid in to the county school fund.

WASHINGTON NOTES

By Congressman Clair Engle

PUBLIC LANDS HEARINGS

On May 19th and 20th the people of Mono and Inyo counties will have an opportunity to tell the Public Lands Committee of the House what they think about the activities of the City of Los Angeles in that area. The committee has set aside those days to hold hearings on the bill which I introduced repealing the act which would permit the city of Los Angeles to buy some of the best recreational area, grazing and mining lands in California for $1.25 per acre. It is expected the City of Los Angeles will have strong representation present to oppose this legislation.

The latter part of the same week, May 21, 22 and 23 the committee will hear witnesses on the general bills to reimburse county governments for tax losses due to federal ownership. I have introduced two of these measures and have requested the hearings. This legislation is of vital concern to all the counties in my district where extensive federal ownership cuts down the tax rolls. I have asked district attorney Edwin J. Regan of Trinity County who is president of the Western States Public Lands Counties Association, and supervisor Ernest Hodge of Tuolumne County who is chairman of the Public Lands Committee of the National County Officials Association to come to Washington to testify.

GOLD BILLS

The Judiciary Committee of the House is appointing a special subcommittee to hear the bill which I intriduced to reimburse the gold miners for losses under the order which closed the gold mines. Extensive hearings were held on this measure during the last session and a ver. good record has been prepared I have been unable up to the present to get a date set by the banking and currency committee to hear the bill to create a free market for domestic newly mined gold. This committee of course has been kept busy with the sugar and rent control legislation.
